

ON THE COVER: Very rarely reported away from their breeding and wintering range in northeastern Nunavut and Greenland, Hornemann's Redpoll (currently considered the nominate subspecies of Hoary Redpoll) was widely reported across a large area of eastern Canada, the Great Lakes states, and New England in winter 2010–2011. Blessed with multiple records of this taxon, Ontario had a small, dedicated army of birders and photographers who documented Hornemann's as well as a larger-than-average flight of the similarly large Greater Redpoll, the rostrata subspecies of Common Redpoll, also from Nunavut and Greenland. This Hornemann's was photographed near Matheson, Ontario on 18 February 2011. Photograph by Brandon R. Holden.
